General Physics Corporation chosen to provide e-learning services for U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Elkridge, MD. March 10, 2004. General Physics Corporation (GP), a subsidiary of GP Strategies Corporation (NYSE: GPX), was selected by GoLearn to integrate, launch and host the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA's) Plateau™ Learning Management System (LMS) and e-learning platform. This will enable USDA to deliver web-based training, provide classroom management capabilities, including scheduling and resource tracking, and manage training and human capital performance, via the Internet.

GP, working with Plateau, will produce a design specification document outlining the technical process necessary to map USDA's requirements to the functionality of the LMS. GP will then perform system integration, content integration, web interface design development, and data migration in order to launch the LMS. GP's hosting services include 24x7x365 monitoring of all applications in a secure facility. In addition, GP will provide Level 1 call center support.
